GOULD FORGIVES POLE CUTTING.

Understood That Cordial Rela- Long List of Exhibitors Are tions Now Exist Between Pennsylvania and Wabash.

Basis of Settlement Said to Be the Sharing of Business in the Pittsburg District.

New York, Oct. 31.-It was learned today from high authority that the disagreements that have existed between the Pennsylvania Railroad and George J. Gould from the time that the Western Union Telegraph poles were cut down along the lines of the railroad are settled, and that cordial relations now exist between these two important financial interests.

During the past week there has been increased activity in all the Gould stocks, led by Missouri Pacific and the Wabash, and there has been large buying of Pennsylvania as well.

It is believed that the basis of settlement is the sharing of business in the Pittsburg district between the Pennsylvania and the Goulds, who, with the Wabash extension into that section, now practically control all the rich tonnage that has its origin there.

It is quite well known in financial circles that the Rockefeliers, who are allied with the Goulds in almost all of their raliroad enterprises, within the past year have accumulated a large block of Pennsylvania stock.

In addition to remaining standing, the flagman must remain in the center of the track until recalled, so that he will be clearly seen by engineers coming up from behind. TO LECTURE ON METHODS IN CARING FOR CHICAGO POOR

Miss Jane Addams, Founder of Hull North Broadway Settlement.

Miss Jane Addams, founder of Hull House, Chicago, the first college settle-ment, will deliver a lecture on the methods pursued in aiding the Chicago poor to help themselves, at the Y. M. C. A. building next Thursday evening, for the benefit of the North Broadway settlement

Hull House, that has been held up as a model to those planning similar settle-ments in England and America, was founded by Miss Addams and Miss Ellen G. Starr in 1889. Then it was a ramshackle, decayed old mansion-house, on Halstead street, that had degenerated into a tene-ment, filled with families living in one room in the upper stories, while a junk shop occupied the ground floor. Now it is surrounded by buildings that cover half a city block, all of which are devoted to the education of the hands and heads of the poor of the district. That quarter of Chicago swarms with foreigners-Italians, Russian Jews, Bohenians and Syrians. There is one house in the settlement entirely given over to children. In it are the Boys' Club, the day oren. In it are the Boys Club, the day nursery, the kindergarten and the music school. The older children, who are too young to go to school, are taken care of in the kindergarten and taught the rudi-ments of English and the practice of per-sonal cleanliness. They are taught to mend their own clothes, as well as the usual mud-pie plays of the Froebel sys-tem.

A coffee-house is found in an adjacent building, where single meals and dishes cooked to take home are sold. Above this is the auditorium, where lectures on industrial and other topics of interest are delivered almost nightly.

In another building is the Labor Museum, most unique among the Hull House enterprises. In the spinning and weaving industry department one may see an old Italian woman or a Syrian weaving a particolored head scarr or an Anatolian doormat, where alongside is a power loom of the most modern type. Near this is a room fitted up as a kitchen, in which the preparation of meals on scientific basis is taught.

preparation of meals on scientific basis is taught.

Other rooms are fitted for metal vork, pottery and the woodworking trades. In all of these departments lectures and object lessons are given. The Jane Cub, a co-operative establishment for women, is near by. Each room of the building is crowded every evening with deouting clubs, arts and crafts society meetings, and the atmosphere is one of striving.

This is not a free charity. Persons pay for what they get, not usual market prices, but sums within their slender means. Those whose children ta'm music lessons pay 10 cents a week for expert instruction. Even the playground, which in winter is made a skating rink, costs 5 cent for admission at night, though it is free to children during the day.
